Is there something in the water in Miami? A rash of downtown hotels are getting makeovers, and there's plenty happening on the Beach, too, from Dream South Beach (now open!) to the work going on at SLS South Beach, The James Royal Palm, the new B South Beach, and the now-it's-a-Kimpton Surfcomber.

Also fresh from a new coat of paint? The Bentley Hotel South Beach.

As owner Keith Menin told us recently, he has been busy shooshing up his flagship property, the Shelborne. Work there won't be fully completed until November, but the Bentley's renos are done, and she's looking a lot lighter and fresher than the photos on the hotel's website would have you believe ...

You can see more of the beachy decor on the Menin Hotels' Facebook page here.

Studios at the Bentley start at $129 a night on weekdays, with one-bedroom oceanfront rooms averaging around $300 on weekends.

The location on Ocean and Fifth Street is about as perfect as you can get, no matter what kind of South Beach stay you're looking for, with that rooftop pool overlooking Lummus Park and the Atlantic.

Menin Hotels' Sanctuary South Beach has also been under the knife--we'll have photos of its new look for you tomorrow ...
